1000mm Lens for Pentax K-5 IIs (Manual Focus)

Generally, I found that for critically sharp focus, I still needed focus confirmation from the camera - the split image screen just helped me get there a bit quicker with manual lenses. One definite downside of split image screens is that, although centre weighted metering still works OK, single point metering becomes erratic and unusable - often a couple of stops out.

Manual focus lenses on Pentax K-5 II

Being a relative novice regarding manual focus with my few old manual lenses, I have had better success with viewfinder focusing by concentrating on the green hexagon at the base of the OVF frame. It needs to be activated by half-pressing the shutter button (or using the AF button).
